

Patrick Mahoney, BS, MPH

Mr. Mahoney is an Advocacy Relations Manager in the Office of Advocacy Relations (OAR) at the National Cancer Institute (NCI). In this role, which he has held since November 2015, Mr. Mahoney focuses on understanding the scientific and policy priorities of the cancer research advocacy community to identify, facilitate and pursue collaborations with the NCI. Prior to joining the OAR, Mr. Mahoney was a Senior Account Executive with Porter Novelli within their Health & Social Impact practice, where he assisted clients to develop communications that influenced behavior to improve health, the environment and education. He holds a Bachelor of Science (BS) from the University of Maryland-College of Park and a Master of Public Health (MPH) from Emory University.